

A Feeling of “Home”

Highland Alzheimer’s Care Residence becomes “home” to most of its long term care residents. “We encourage families to personalize each resident’s room with artwork, lamps, furniture, or a familiar bedspread. Anything that will help their loved ones recognize their surroundings and to feel contented” Say Mike and Cindy McElroy, the Owners of Highland. “We strive to become the place they call home, or at least their home away from home. Our staff does a great job of taking care of our residents as if they were one of their own families. Highland’s frequent special social events and activity programs integrate residents’ families and staff to create an incredible home-like environment. In many cases, Highland’s staff has “adopted” family members as well, by getting to know spouses, children and relatives well enough to keep up on their health and well-being issues in addition to the everyday care that is provided for each resident. We are really proud of the family relationships that we have here at Highland.”

Every manageable aspect of Highland is aimed at creating and maintaining a homelike environment. “We believe that things are going very much in the right direction based on all the positive feedback that we receive from our residents and their families.” Stated Mike and Cindy McElroy, “Our architecture and décor are very appealing with traditional colors and furnishings along with large windows to brighten up everything with lots of natural sunlight. We provide home cooked meals and desserts 7 days a week. Our housekeepers clean every day and the laundry staff does linens and personal clothing each day as well (nothing is sent out). Personalized activities programs are scheduled morning and evening every day.”
